Display advertising is probably the most underutilized opportunity on the content network. One excellent scenario for leveraging this is when you've got a successful text ad already running on the content network. Turn it into a display ad and then:

- Initially Bid 3-4x higher than you were for the text ad: In order for Google to show a display ad using the entirety of the adsense placement available on a given page, they need to make up for the revenue they will lose in the other 3 text space spaces. (A successful text ad converted to a display ad in this format usually has a high probability of producing a volume of profitable conversions using this method)
- Use content ad groups and placements with previously proven success
- Ensure the color scheme of the new display ad is consistent with your landing page
- Use standard dimensions / file sizes
- Test, Test Test!

The Benefits of Display Ads

1. Higher CTR

- ∅ Flash ads, Image ads, and Video ads are visually stimulating & encourage action

2. Lower CPC

- ∅ You are assigned a QS for each individual page on the content network
- ∅ Higher CTR = higher QS = More coverage at lower costs

3. Higher Conversion Rate

- ∅ You have a chance to explain your product / service through a more visual platform

4. Display Insights

- ∅ Google is beta testing a function that would allow you to track a conversion back to the original impression that was served to a user. (We have access to this beta for Rocket Clicks clients ... www.payperclickmuscle.com)

5. Behavioral Context Advertising

- ∅ Google is beta testing ad serving on the content network based on consumer behavior in search and browsing history:
  - Imagine a sports fan who is constantly viewing content related to sports, and you find out he is a huge football fan.
  - If you were trying to sell hotel rooms for the next big game, wouldn't you want to find him, no matter what website he is on?
